

LYNN NOELLE RUSHTON

brings "the Texas native's bravado and love of the West" to her work. She received a BFA from Vanderbilt University and has won awards nationally for her work that combines the aesthetics of post-Impressionist European art with subject matter that resonates with the American Scene painters of the 30s and 40s. Using oils and the ancient hot wax medium of encaustic, Rushton refers to her works as "painted stories," and focuses on the rural landscape as well as community, urban, and everyday life. Rushton has painted in Europe and Asia and lives today in Dallas.
